Protolabs Announces Departure of CFO John Way, Appoints Dan Schumacher Interim CFO

November 5, 2021

MINNEAPOLIS--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Nov. 5, 2021-- Protolabs (NYSE: PRLB), a leading online and technology-enabled, on-demand manufacturer, today announced John Way is resigning as Chief Financial Officer (CFO) to pursue an opportunity at another company. Way will continue in his role through November 30, 2021.

Dan Schumacher, Vice President of Investor Relations and FP&A, has been named Interim CFO effective December 1, 2021. Schumacher has been with Protolabs for four years leading the company's investor relations and FP&A organizations, and has reported directly to Way since he joined the company in 2017. Schumacher will continue to work closely with Way and Rob Bodor, Protolabs' President and CEO, over the next month to ensure a smooth transition.

"I want to thank John for his leadership at Protolabs. During his tenure John built a strong financial organization that will continue to serve us well in the years to come," said Bodor.

"It has been a great pleasure to serve as CFO of Protolabs over the past seven years," said John Way. "I have the utmost confidence in the company and I am grateful for having had the opportunity to work with the leading digital manufacturer in the industry."
