"We are excited to welcome Sean as the leader of our Americas sales team at Protolabs," said Mike Kenison, Vice President and General Manager of the Americas at

Protolabs. "Bringing extensive leadership experience with business-to-business industries, Sean will play a vital role in shaping our strategic sales strategy around our comprehensive manufacturing offer and helping tailor that offer to best fit our customer needs."

Farrell joins Protolabs after serving as Vice President of Sales at SmartSense by Digi. A business unit of Digi International, SmartSense is a leader in IoT solutions for health care, retail, food service, and education. Prior to Digi, he held various sales leadership and general management roles guiding high-growth teams in industries including semiconductor, renewable energy, logistics, and distribution working with market leaders like Applied Materials and ITW. He has a B.S. degree in Electrical Engineering.

"As a sales leader, you value working for a company that is constantly evolving to better serve its customers," Farrell said. "Protolabs' focus on innovation has transformed how digital manufacturing is used during product development, and I look forward to helping shape our future as the industry leader."
